As indicated on pg. 102, (1) write down your relative value for each of the above identity groups on a scale of 1-5. In other words, if you consider your personal identity within your social class to be of great importance, then give it either a score of 4 or 5. If you place a minimal value on your identity within a religious group, for example, then write 1 or 2. (2) Also, write down at least three more identity groups with which you can identify and also place the relative values beside each identity. (3) Below each group, write a sentence or two, as to why that particular group identity has little significance to you, or has a great bearing on your identity. (4) On the line beside the letter P (Past), write down the relative value for your parent's generation, and beside F (Future), the relative value for the next generation (your children). Of course, you are to merely reflect on the perceptions of the past and how you perceive these identities to possibly change in the future. You do not need to write down any comments about the past/future.
